

WINTER IS For the Birds

One of our favorite activities is watching the birds out our big dining room window. God really has amazing creations in this world.

Use a bird book to identify the birds that come to visit with you.

By the way, all bird books use drawings instead of photos, do you know why? Email me with your answer

We have so many different kinds - and they are so much fun to watch.

Our three-year-old cat, Jasmine, pretends she is a statue, hoping that a bird will pause long enough for her to catch it. The birds are way too smart to fall for that trick; but she tries.

We have now added more cats to our family... the kittens are much too impatient. They get anxious and scare the birds away. They are certainly entertaining though.

Make peanut butter cookie cutter treats for the birds. Take old bread slices and cut out shapes with cookie cutters. Let them dry and harden enough to spread with peanut butter.

Cover the peanut buttered shapes with black sunflower seeds and hang outdoors on trees or anywhere birds might come!
